Chapter 1 by LiamLeblanc13

Jake sat down in the chair. How was it possible? He was the last human in the city. The last human!

Jake stopped for a minute. And thought about before. Before the cyborgs took over the city, before they spread the plague.

When he was first born, he was familiar with humans. But they all died out from the plague. After that he had gotten used to cyborgs. They accepted him, in a way. They thought he was like them because the plague couldn't affect him.

And the only reason Jake wasn't dead yet... well, only him and his mother knew that. In fact, it was the last secret his mother ever told him.

In the few seconds Jake's mother had on Earth before the plague took her life, she looked at Jake, and said "you are immune to the plague. You must understand that first. There used to be more of them but, - oh, Jake. It is too much to explain. I don't have the time. The cyborgs have

Now, Jake would finally find out. He had been sitting in the operators chair, in the cyborg control room. His minuscule size let him crawl through an empty fire duct.

The control room was abandoned, of course. The cyborgs had no intention of being controlled by humans.

Jake looked at the screen. He had been waiting for this moment all of his life - after all, the fire duct was heavily guarded.

Jake initiated the Cyborg Intelligence Database. It was working! Jake's heard pounded. What if he was caught? Well, there was nothing he could do about it now.

All he had to do was wait for the Database to load. Every now and then Jake would check on the database's progress.

80%...

85%...

90%...

95%...

He was so close! Everything he ever wanted to know he could learn!

99%....

Jake froze. He quickly stopped the database's progress. He could have sworn he heard a noise. Was it a cyborg?

"Hello," a voice said.

That was not the voice of a cyborg. Jake slowly turned around.

It was another human.

"Aaah!" Jake proclaimed in fear.

"Hush!" whispered the girl in front of him. "Do you know how many cyborgs we are surrounded by?! are you trying to get us killed?" The girl asked, with an angry whisper- while Jake sat in front of her, completely shocked.

"Um... ehh..."- Jake murmured quietly, as more questions then he could ever ask popped in his head. Who was this girl? what is she doing here, and how did she even get here?

The girl looked at Jake with a slowly growing smile.

"Who taught you to speak?" She asked, with a subtly sarcastic and doubtful tone.

Jake laughed quietly. "Sorry, I was just really surprised," he answered with honesty. "Yeah, the whole scream thing gave it away."-Responded the girl.

"Oh- I'm Jake, by the way." he responded.

"Well well," said the girl. "I'm Mia- and can you please, for the love of our long forgotten god, finish the search in the database?"

Jake hadn't noticed the database had loaded. A green screen appeared. Jake closed his eyes. All his life's work led up to this moment. Something appeared on the screen, but he didn't have time to look at it. Mia tumbled to the ground.

"Mia!" Jake screamed. Three men walked into the room. Wait... they weren't men. Cyborgs. "W-what," stammered Jake. The cyborgs did not reply. Jake's mind was spinning. Should he run? The cyborgs had treated him as an equal, though. What was happening? Jake's fear got the best of him, and he took off down the hall.
